Editor's Blurb

Our Beltane issue is full of vibrancy thanks to our Contributors; two beautiful poems by Amber, and Hannah; a family pilgrimage to Corrin's Tower on the Isle of Man by TheDruid3x3, and a thought provoking article by Hannah on summer. I would also like to thank Hannah for taking over our regular "Sky at Night", a busy lady indeed.

Also, check out PaganAid for it's latest project with Baz the Bee, their new Mascot. There is a beard growing event; seed bookmarks; and a way to get rid of your old books, CD's etc.

The Pagan Federation is celebrating it's 50th Anniversary! What an incredible milestone for this trail-blazer! And it's thanks to each and everyone of You.

Normally, Beltane rituals would be lighting up the skies, but with Covid-19 still a "clear and present danger", we have to do things a little differently. Pagans are a resourceful lot, and I know that everyone will work something out so that our Rites can be shared safely.

May the fires of Beltane cleanse and energise us to a better future for All.

Bright Blessings

District Managers Report – BELTANE 2021

Salutations on this momentous occasion: the 50th Anniversary of the Pagan Federation!

Join with us as we lustily and loudly toot our horn here because in this fast-paced and fickle world, there isn't much that endures for such a long time. The reason the Pagan Federation is here today and thriving is due to a number of factors: perseverance, hard work, a sense of purpose, your contributions as members, and the pressing need for a network of support and information on Paganism in the world today. People of many Pagan leanings have stuck to the aims and intentions of the founders. Undaunted by a sometimes hostile and often derisory media, public misunderstanding and the weight of historical animosity, Pagans have gradually chipped away at the prejudices and misinformation to assert our place as practitioners of an ancient and Nature-venerating path. It can be lonely at times, deeply demoralising and frustrating, but look how far we've come!

The work doesn't end of course, because rights can be threatened and tested even in the most tolerant of societies. This isn't to say we need to be forever looking over our shoulders in fear, but vigilance is necessary and that's where the Pagan Federation comes in. We've got your back, whether you have been a Pagan for decades, or since last week. Thank you for being part of this great adventure.

Ongoing pandemic precautions mean that the big celebratory bash is taking place online, so the best place to keep up to date with this (and other PF news) is via the PF Community Facebook page here: https://www.facebook.com/groups/paganfed

It is necessary to join the group and answer a few basic questions to access it. If you don't do Facebook, ask us at the email address at the bottom of this page, and we'll try to find out the information you require.

REGIONAL REPORTS

THREE COUNTIES REGION (Herefordshire, Gloucestershire and Worcestershire)

Three Counties Regional Report - Beltane 2021

Gradually emerging from the confines of Winter, we delight in the greening of hedgerows and woodlands, fields, riversides, parks and gardens. New life is around us again, birds migrate from their winter homes, and Nature is burgeoning once more. Even if covid has curtailed our Springtime travels and Pagan revelry, we can still get outside.

Places to visit: You might like to stop by at Herefordshire's Neolithic burial mound, known as Arthur's Stone, managed by English Heritage. Located near the village of Dorstone, this ancient Pagan monument is around 5,000 years old and, unlike some ancient sites, is easily accessible by road because it sits right next to one! Head for Arthur's Stone Lane, Dorstone, HR3 6AX and keep sharp-eyed or you could miss it. Sort of a glorified lay-by really, no facilities and just a few car parking spaces, this site has a special serene ambience and due to location, very little passing traffic. Take a picnic, a camera, a few friends. Please don't bury crystals or leave any burning tea lights, though. There has been too much of this sort of thing at some sites, it doesn't help and can harm.

The mighty and majestic River Severn! Winding her lovely way through Worcestershire and Gloucestershire, this is Britain's longest river and is the spiritual home of the Goddess Sabrina. Find out more here on this page by local author: Sabrina, Goddess of the River Severn by Nicola Haasz | Facebook

Gloucestershire is home to our friends the Cotswold Order of Druids, keepers of ancient wisdom as well as putting on a really great Pagan shindig when required! Down caves, up hills, stone circles, they get everywhere. Find out what they're up to by looking at their Facebook page: The Cotswold Order of Druids | Facebook

Another group in that county is the Gloucestershire Pagans, you can find them at: Gloucestershire Pagans | Facebook

Okay, plenty to be going on with there! Do let us know if there is anything happening Paganwise that you think might interest other members, we are always open to new ideas.

Best wishes,

Audrey

MID-WEST REGION (Staffordshire and Shropshire)

Please see the Moots listing towards the end of the Myddle Earth magazine for get-togethers in Kidsgrove, Stafford and Stoke-on-Trent.

Staffs & Shropshire (Mid-west Region) Regional Report

Well, there isn't much to say since we don't live in this part of the District and don't have anyone doing the PF work there.

VACANCY – REGIONAL COORDINATOR

We need someone to take on the role of admin for this Region. There are 24 members currently, would any one of you like to take this on? It would not involve a lot of work, a few hours a week probably, and the occasional meeting over Zoom. Any takers?

If this interests you, please contact us at the email address below and we'll have a noobligation chat about it. In the meantime, we will take care of things ourselves.

All good wishes,

Earthshine nights occur on 7th and 14th May. This is when the dark part of the moon becomes more visible.

On July 13^{th,} our two closest planets Mars and Venus will appear in the sky together. Try and spot them just after sunset when they will be low on the horizon.

The Delta Aquarids Meteor Shower takes place this month and is best visible on 28/29 July. This shower can produce up to 20 meteors per hour.

Historical Skies

From May 13th to 16th of 1921 there was a series of coronal mass ejections from the sun which bombarded Earth. The Aurora was seen from Britain and this severe space weather event caused mayhem with the technology of the time and ignited fires.

SIGNS

by Amber

There are signs all around, All you need to do is look, And you'll see what I found.

The white Faery steed beneath the fern, Will ride with you all night, beneath the stars and moon, that shimmer with a silver glow.

The birds of the air are calling to you, Do hear what they say?

There is a track to walk for me and you, And there can be no delay, Take that step, walk with me, Let us see what we can find.

We can skim over water, dive under the sea,
Ride, oh ride, oh ride on your Faery horse through the velvet of the night.
And when the dawn brings redness to the sky,
We shall play in the surf of life.

Summer—the season of Life

by Hannah

The sun is shining, the flowers are blooming, the days are long and languorous and the evenings sweet smelling and sultry. All is right with the world.

Summer is a season all about life and if you look, life is abundant all around you in the flora and fauna. The plants are teeming with insects of all kinds, including bees and butterflies. The bodies of water are now graced by the iridescence of dragonflies. Everything is really living its life in the most industrious way.

The same can be said of humans too. We really live in the summer making most of the light that there is. We tend to be more optimistic and generally happier because the suns rays are supplying us with the vitamins we need to really live.

The Hopi Indians certainly believed that the sun was life giving. The sun was at the heart of the cosmos and they worshipped the sun as a supreme deity. The sun was relied upon for the growth of the corn to feed their people and of course they were not the only ones, all cultures knew the importance of the sun and that it was needed for life.

The Incans revered the sunflower as a symbol of the life-giving sun and these giants of the plant world certainly do resemble the sun and summer, and are even life giving themselves. They not only provide birds, insects and humans with a food source, but they are also good for absorbing toxins in the environment. In Japan, after the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear disaster, the Joenji Buddhist temple has distributed about 8 million sunflowers and 200,000 other plants such as field mustard, Amaranthus and cockscomb, which are all believed to absorb radiation.

The sun and its representations are but one symbol of life, there are many others.

Water is another important one and the Ancient Egyptians certainly knew that it was fundamental. The Nile River which was their main source of water was extremely important and sacred to them. They worshipped many Gods associated with the Nile including Happy, who was the main deity of the Nile, Sobek, the crocodile god and Heket, the frog goddess.

The Nile irrigated the surrounding land so they could grow crops, and the colour black (which was the colour of the fertile silt soil) was considered to be the colour of life by the Ancient Egyptians contrary to what the western world believed.

The Ankh, also known as the key of life, is another symbol of life that the Ancient Egyptians had. The hieroglyph meant the word life and became a symbol of life it self. It was commonly represented being held in the deities hands as a sign of them having the power to sustain life, sometimes the Ankh represented air or water which were both representations of life in Egypt. Water, as well as air, is often depicted in art as the breath of life where the gods have bestowed it to the pharaoh.

The most widespread symbol of life has got to be the tree. It is in much of the world's mythology and the philosophical and religious traditions. It appears in the cultures of the Assyrians, in ancient Urartu, ancient Iran and in the Mesoamerican civilisations. In religions the tree is also found in the Bahai Faith, Buddhism, Chinese mythology, Christianity, Islam, Judaism, The Kabbalah, Hinduism and in the Gnostic faiths.

The tree of life is featured in the myths of North American tribes, and in the Serer religion of Senegal in West Africa where the tree forms the basis of their cosmology as they were the first things made on earth.

The ancient Slavic culture has its tree of life standing on a rock called Alatyr which is on the island of Buyan in the middle of the World ocean, and then of course there is Yggdrasil, the tree of life in Norse mythology around which all exists. This sacred ash or yew tree holds the nine worlds, its branches extend far into the heavens and the roots extend just as far to other locations.

Even today the symbols of the sun, sunflowers, water, the ankh and the tree are seen as a symbols and representations of life, especially the sun, water and the tree as they truly are life giving. Without them life would not exist on our planet, we need the sun and water for the growth of the food we eat, the water we need to drink, and the trees provide life in so many ways.

Trees do not just give us clean air and provide oxygen, they also combat climate change, cool the planet, save water, prevent soil erosion, provide food, provide fuel, provide wildlife habitats and help with healing.

Trees surely are the epitome of life and the summertime is a great time to live.

Next time you are sat under the shade of a tree, keeping cool from the heat of the sun and sipping a drink of water, think about how surrounded by life you really are.

SUMMERS STORY by Hannah

The sun she shines
Startling bright
Reflecting in puddles
Her blinding light,
Grazing all things
With golden hues
Gracing the day
With her radiant muse.

Her warmth caresses
As she shines upon,
Igniting joy
With her glowing song,
We feel embraced
In her crowning glory
As we laze beneath fires
Of summers glory.

Passing on Ritual at Corrin's Tower

Corrin's Tower by TheDruid-3X3

On the hill overlooking the City of Peel, on the Isle of Man, stands a stone tower known as Corrin's Tower. This monument was built around 1806 by Thomas Corrin, who owned the hill and much land nearby. The site and its position at the summit of the hill was one of his favourite places and there next to the tower, in a small outlined graveyard, is where he laid to rest his wife and two children. Their graves are marked out with pillars of stone.

Corrin's Tower, also known as Corrin's Folly, is four storeys high. Much of the inside is taken up with a pillar set in the centre of the building which starts out square on the ground floor, but goes more round as it moves up through the floors to the roof. Memorial tablets of stone, as well as inscriptions on the walls, mark the ground and first floor with memories of departed Corrins'.

Corrin's Tower by TheDruid-3X3

Thomas Corrin often stayed on the third floor reading by a small fireplace. As a consequence, the windows on all three floors of the east side of the tower are blocked up, due to complaints that ships were mistaking the tower light for the Peel breakwater light.

There are many footpaths leading up the hill to Corrin's Tower. Most are from the Peel Harbour side near the bridge across the Marina, and the hill can be accessed from Fenella Beach car park. It is a fair walk away, even though it does not seem far. The Tower itself is locked to the public at this time, but viewing the outside of the building and nearby graves are still worth the walk.

The day before I was there during my Family Ancestral Pilgrimage, I heard that the Corrin's Tower was Haunted by the Spirit of Thomas Corrin, the broken hearted Father of a Wife and Child who both died during Childbirth.

So I decided to do a 'Passing On Ritual' to cleanse the Spirit of Thomas Corrin, and pay his Ferryman's Toll for his Spirit Passing on to his Next Life.

First, I placed a Blueberry scented tealight candle at the Eastern corner of the Tower and at the Western corner; a red tapered candle at the Southern corner and at the Northern corner. Each time I said something like: "Greetings to you Watchtower of the East, the Great Guardian of the Sacred Element of Air, I call on your Power for this Ritual of Passing on of the Personal Emotional Energies of Thomas Corrin, whose Soul was Negatively Impacted by the Sudden Passing of his Wife and Child. With No Harm to None, I Welcome you to this Ritual in Peace: So Mote It Be!"

This was repeated for each of the corners respectively for Fire, Water and Earth.

I lit a stick of Lavender and shook it towards the Eastern Quarter of the Tower three times whilst reciting: "Oh Sacred Element of Air, may you allow this Lavender Incense to bring Peace and Tranquillity to the Soul of Thomas Corrin so that it may Pass On back to the Goddess to Reuse, Reshape, and Reuse on her Great Spinning Wheel of Life. May your Soul have Acceptance of what happened to your Wife and Child with Peace and Tranquillity. With No Harm To None, So Mote It Be!"

I then lit a stick of Lavender Incense for each of the other Quarters repeating my actions and words as above, respecting each Quarters element.

Then I took out my Branch of Eucalyptus and went about the Tower touching it to each corner, starting from the Eastern corner, going counter-clockwise while chanting something like: "May this Ritual Purify and Cleanse the Spirit of Thomas Corrin of his Negative Emotional Energies caused by the Pain and Sorrow of losing his Wife and Child." I went about the Tower making this Chant a total of three times.

I then changed direction and went about the Tower in a Cleansing clockwise Direction touching my Eucalyptus Branch to each Corner, starting from the Eastern corner, Chanting something like: "May you now have Peace, Tranquillity, and Acceptance of the Cycles of Life, as they may come and go, and may you have Acceptance that your Wife and Child's Souls were never harmed and were sent back to the Goddess to harmlessly Reuse, Reshape and Recycle into Future Incarnations. May you Pass On to join them with their Future Incarnations."

Then after making my Cleansing Chants, I made a Sacrifice to the Grave of the dearly departed souls, Kathrine Corrin and her child by burying into the grave a Canadian Two Dollar Twoonie Coin, a Five Yen Japanese Coin, a Canadian Flag Souvenir Pin, and a Sprig of Eucalyptus to pay their Ferryman's Toll from the Realms of the Living to the Realms of the Dead.

There was a small window in the Tower so I tossed a couple of Japanese Five Yen Coins through the Window into the Tower, chanting: "Oh Thomas Corrin, here is your Ferryman's Toll across the River of Life from the Realms of the Living to the Realms of the Dead, with Peace and Tranquillity having been brought to your Soul by this Passing On Ritual."

Afterwards I sat down to enjoy the views of the countryside until the Incense and candles at the corners had burnt down and gone out. It was then that I made one last gesture of respect for my Family Ancestral Tower, then went on my way back down the hill and continued with my touring of the town of Peel.
